ABOUT

A female artist and painter who immersed herself in her art, weaving it into the fabric of her emotions, profession, and daily life. Opted to become an art teacher as the sole means to convey her artistic sentiments onto paper. She resorted to using the metaphor of nature and trees as symbols of femininity throughout her years of painting in Iran. Painting in nature became a way for her to express women's figures unfolding before her eyes. She dedicated most of her free time to painting outdoors. Having lived in Berlin for several years now, she has begun exploring the nature of this city.
